

Occupational Medicine

Description

Environmental Health and Safety administers the Occupational Medicine Program for employees and students who may be exposed to health risks during the course and scope of their work and research activities.

The program functions collaboratively with university partners to provide risk assessment, medical monitoring, testing services, vaccination and training in compliance with regulatory and accreditation requirements.

Emerging health concerns are managed as an opportunity to educate, increase safety awareness, and cultivate relationships.

Physical Job Duties

Patient Contact

Biopath Physicals

Hearing Conservation Program

Respirator Use

Animal Contact Occupational Health